Not illustrated. 1854 Excerpt: . . . here, and, afterwards, by the Emperor Marcus Aurelius. It is only after the heathen consciousness has been enlarged so as objectively to acknowledge the existence, in the world, of a Divine order and law, that a place is afforded where the confession of the Apostles and of the Church may, with the hope of being understood, be proclaimed with all liberty, and in its entire, full, and deep contents. In the appearance of king Agrippa in this place, we have thus to acknowledge the biblical truth of that power which is so full of importance for history, and which, by a dark and perplexing expression, has been designated by the name of the Christian magistrate and the Christian state. But it is, for this reason, all the more necessary to attend to the fact, that it is expressly pointed out that the position of...
