GRIN Verlag GmbH. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 84 pages. Dimensions: 8.3in. x 5.8in. x 0.4in. Essay from the year 2011 in the subject Art - Overall Considerations, grade: -, San Diego State University, language: English, comment: Art and the Innovation economy , abstract: According to Business Week Magazine: The game is changing . . . it isnt just about math and science anymore (although those are surely important disciplines) its about creativity, imagination, and, above all, innovation. 1 If creativity and innovation will be the hallmarks of the most successful communities in the 21st century we need to know the answers to the fundamental questions of what makes us creative, innovative, and imaginative. The effort to create a 21st century community is not so much about technology as it is about jobs, dollars and quality of life. It is about organizing ones community to reinvent itself for the new, knowledge economy and society; preparing its citizens to take ownership of their community; and, most importantly, about educating the next generation of leaders and workers to meet the global, social, political and economic challenges we face. This commentary focuses on education and the vital role of the arts in preparing our young people for a new and uncertain future. Although many people still believe that the arts are nice but not necessary, it is becoming increasingly apparent that the arts are not a frill or an ancillary enrichment activity for elites. Indeed, they may be the most important aspect of a 21st century education. Our schools need the arts and an art-infused curriculum to ensure our childrens and our countrys competitiveness in the new global innovation economy. This item ships from multiple locations.
