BIOTECH`S DICTIONARY OF FORESTRY

Biotech Books/Daya Publishing House, 2006. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. The most valuable assets of our planet are forests. The importance of forests in our ecology has made them useful for human beings. It is believed that Homo erectus used wood for the fire at least 7,50,000 years ago. Forestry pertains to the science of developing and managing the woodlands, along with all the resources of forests. The earliest know instance of organised reforestation was recorded in Germany in 1368, and...
